Dear ▮▮▮▮▮▮

Official Information Act Request Our Reference: SSC2018/0167

Thank you for your request for information, which we received on 28 September 2018, about the development of the Open Government Partnership National Action Plan 2018-20. You asked for the following information:

1   For each of the 12 commitments in the action plan, whether it was proposed by a member of the public during the consultation process, or by a public servant or government agency (and if so, which).

All the commitments respond to an idea or multiple ideas offered by members of the public during the ideas generation phase at the start of the consultation to develop the third National Action Plan. This includes ideas based on recommendations from the Open Government Partnership's (OGP) Independent Reporting Mechanism (IRM).

The 12 commitments were developed by agencies in response to 449 ideas offered. Most of the commitments reflect a specific idea offered by one or many people, for example civics education for young people, while other commitments respond to multiple, related ideas or underlying problems, for example on the regulatory regime and administrative practice for official information.

Following advice from OGP International, public servants were encouraged to submit any ideas during the ideas generation phase in April/May 2018. This ensured greater transparency for all ideas being proposed and allowed others to comment on all ideas. It also allowed public servants to offer ideas that reflect their personal views about opportunities to improve open government.

The spreadsheet, which you can find at www.ogp.org.nz/ogp-nap3-ideas-to-action-sept2018, demonstrates the linkages between ideas submitted and the themes and commitments in the draft plan.

Attached is a copy of that spreadsheet, sorted so you can see where the majority of the ideas contributed to the commitments. There is not a perfect match for some ideas that contributed to more than one theme and/or commitment.

I have set out more details below about how the public's ideas contributed to the commitments, in response to your second question.

2   All advice on the final selection of commitments. I'm interested in learning what criteria were used, whether a commitment being already underway was considered, any specific ranking or assessment of possible commitments, and what ultimately led to these particular commitments being chosen.

While there were some base criteria for the final selection of commitments (see below), as stated in answer to your first question, the Plan is the culmination of a process rather than the result of the application of a set of criteria. The 12 commitments were derived through a theming and synthesising process from the ideas generated by the engagement process. They may reflect an actual idea that was submitted and/or the subject matter of a number of ideas and/or a problem to which a number of ideas related.

Throughout the process agencies were tested and challenged to stretch both their ambition and the extent to which they will engage civil society in the implementation of commitments.

The criteria

The criteria applied to the development of commitments was derived from the OGP expectations and notified at the commencement of the process. See:

- www.ogp.org.nz/new-zealands-plan/a-successful-national-action-plan
- advice in the OGP Government Point of Contact Manual that also informed development of the proposed commitments
www.opengovpartnership.org/POC-Manual2017

The process to select the commitments

The Expert Advisory Panel (EAP) provided advice on the process for and development of the draft National Action Plan 2018-20, and was involved at each stage of development of the commitments. See details about the EAP members involved here: www.ogp.org.nz/nap3-expert-advisory-panel-sept2018.

The process to develop the draft Plan and the collateral developed at different stages are available on the OGPNZ website www.ogp.org.nz/new-zealands-plan/third-national-action-plan-2018-2020.

In summary the process to arrive at the final 12 commitments was, as follows:

Engagement and ideas generation – April/May 2018

- We invited the public, including public servants, to provide ideas for the Plan on-line and at six workshops. All 449 ideas were posted on-line for other contributors to expand, rate or comment on.

Theming and Synthesis – June/July 2018

- All 449 ideas were sorted into groups of like ideas for consideration at a meeting of officials and the Expert Advisory Panel (EAP) on 5 June. Seven themes were identified (listed in relative priority order by the meeting attendees). The themes and the ideas linked to them can be viewed on the OGPNZ website here: www.ogp.org.nz/new-zealands-plan/third-national-action-plan-2018-2020.
At that meeting, some ideas were confirmed as out-of-scope for the open government programme and these have been referred on to the most relevant government agency.

- The OGP team at the State Services Commission contacted 17 agencies that were in a position to lead investigation of particular themes or sub-themes and asked them to identify possible initiatives to respond to the themes and related ideas. Initial discussion between the SSC officials and agencies tested and stretched the proposals for consideration at the synthesis workshop.

- The then Associate Minister for State Services (Open Government) advised her ministerial colleagues of the themes, highlighting the likely responsible portfolios, and seeking support and encouragement. Officials were also asked to ensure their Ministers were briefed if they were proposing initiatives to be included in the plan.

- At a synthesis workshop on 2 July, the EAP, representatives from the public workshops and officials discussed possible initiatives for all seven themes that had potential to become Plan commitments. The three priority themes were identified as well as the important overarching aspirations about diversity and inclusion. Preferred initiatives were also indicated.

- Some potential commitments were not progressed beyond this point because they were existing work programmes (e.g. protected disclosure and registers of beneficial ownership of companies and trusts) and did not have any particular aspects of additional work or stretch, in response to the ideas collected, that merited inclusion in the Plan. (See paragraph 18 of the draft Plan).

- The commitments all build directly or indirectly on existing agency and cross-agency work programmes aimed at improving open government. When agencies were approached to respond to the themes identified on 5 June we told them that proposed commitments needed to demonstrate a sufficient level of additional work or "stretch" for the government agency tasked with delivery. The level of 'stretch' was particularly important for any initiative that may have been planned, or was underway or was an expansion of a current programme. The level of stretch was tested and agencies pushed by the EAP (and Workshop attendees) as the Plan was developed.

- Two of the final commitments (Commitment 4 and 5) not only respond to ideas raised during the ideas generation phase but also follow on directly from commitments in the National Action Plan 2016-18. Commitment 4 relates to the 2016-18 commitment about improving access to legislation; this has been identified by the independent IRM researcher as potentially transformational and has starred status. The IRM researcher recommended that both these commitments be pursued further, see www.opengovpartnership.org/New-Zealand_MidTerm_2016-2018.pdf. Support for these recommendations was reiterated by Wellington workshop participants.

Developing the detail of the commitments – July/August 2018

- Officials from the lead agencies were tasked with testing potential commitments with Ministers and developing the detailed description of the commitments.

- On 11 July, officials presented proposed commitments at a workshop with the EAP. These commitments were further refined as a result of EAP's feedback to become the 12 commitments in the Draft Plan.

Ministerial confirmation of the draft Plan – August/September 2018

- The Draft Plan was then submitted to Ministers and was approved by Cabinet on 17 September for release for public comment. See:

Online submitter	Good Information That Is Easy To Understand	My hypothesis is that while transparency stops secrecy, and enables more open government, it does not limit deception. For example, misinformation and misunderstanding follows when accountability documents underplay sensitive financial and performance information, and when planners are forced to write bland and uninformative advice, using evasive and indirect statements that substitute for free and frank advice. My idea is to provide every strategy, governance and planning manager with training and incentives to help their planners and financial advisors to think in a way that enables good decision-making and ensures the decision can be understood and tested by people who do not understand the technical issues. If we really want open government then we need to find a way to make sure New Zealanders can assess the credibility of the accountability information.		Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Online submitter	OIA departmental star rating system	The OIA is a critical part of an accountable democracy. However, there is no requirement for public servants to understand this mechanism or the wider democratic pillars, such as freedom of information, freedom of the press, academic freedom. Culturally, many public servants see those that make OIA requests as "trouble makers", not as empowered citizens acting within a healthy democracy. There appears also to be little accountability around the OIA within government departments other than to attempt requests are actioned within the 20 days and many departments purposefully drag out replies to the 20th day to slow down public inquiries through the OIA. It is recommended that: ☐OIA and an understanding of democratic instruments are mandatory for all public servants ☐That departments are mreasured and rated through a simple 5 star system based on metrics such as: ☐Posting average reply time (not just initial acknowledgement) ☐Percentage of staff who are trained as above ☐Deduction of points/stars for escalations to ombudsman ☐Customer service satisfaction surveys from those who made requests ☐Employment agreements especially those in senior roles to ensure the above ☐The star system would be published in their annual report ☐Any department scoring less than 3 stars (i.e. minimum requirements), placed under strict monitoring		Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	MoJ, SSC	In June the idea was grouped under theme five.
Online submitter	Reform official information laws and refocus the Open Data and Information Programme to publish social, environmental, and budget expenditure data	The IRM researcher recommends the following actions when amending the OIA: Align OIA eligibility for requests with eligibility of the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act 1987 (i.e. removing the residence and citizenship requirements to make a request); Apply the OIA to certain parliamentary information, excluding Members of Parliament s constituency work; Add proactive release to the OIA protection against certain actions Amend the OIA withholding grounds to make them subject to a public interest; Extend the scope so the OIA applies directly to private organisations providing public services under contract; and Provide the Ombudsman with powers to specify what kinds of information government agencies should proactively publish. The Open Government Information and Data Programme makes public government-held information for people, communities, and businesses to reuse. While this and the first action plan have addressed open data access and practices, the IRM researcher recommends that the next action plan also include commitments on open data and focus on identified user demand. This should include regular open format publishing of government s open and aggregated social (including housing) data, as anticipated in the previous IRM researcher s recommendation three and go some way towards addressing the previous Government s decision to stop publishing The Social Report. Reporting on environmental outcomes should also continue, and reporting on actual budget expenditure and public		Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ

Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	OIA Proactive Publication	Add a provision requiring proactive publication but consult the public as well as agencies on what shape this should take. It should include publication of the following - research which has been commissioned by government, awarded contracts, and social, environmental and expenditure.	The OIA doesn't have this requirement currently.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Audit Agencies Compliance with S22	Agencies' compliance with S22 needs to be audited and the publication of internal guidance, policies and recommend improvements.	The public doesn't know how well S22 is being followed by agencies and what policies and processes they are following to interpret the law.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Transparency of Decision Making	Government should have to show its working and be open to the data that has been used to make decisions. The public should be able to review data, engage with someone and challenge: ☐forecast assumption ☐poicy assumption> ☐scientific research - where has it been peer reviewed, by who	Government is not transparent about the background workings and underlying assumptions of research and data. People have the right to know how decisions that effect them are made.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Improving the relationship between OIA, LGOIMA, Public Records Act	OIA, LGOIMA, Public Records Act relationships need to be tidied up as they cross over one another.	The laws cross over and are not easy to use together.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Clarify Responsibilities for the OIA	Public agency responsibility for the OIA is quite confusing for the general public - even the delegation letter between agencies is not public. Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	OIA Scope of Bodies	The OIA should be extended to cover more bodies. These include: ⦁The Office of the Clerk, Parliamentary Services, Offices of Parliament and the Speaker excluding matters subject to Parliamentary priviledge ⦁private bodies delivering public services under contract.It is possible to add them to the schedule in the Order ⦁SOEs (Energy companies) ⦁Newly created bodies - add them into theOIA scope	The OIA excludes too many bodies.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	OIA Timeframes for Response	The OIA timeframes for response are too long and too lax. These need to be tightened up so information can be received in a timely manner and agencies can't delay repeatedly.	The OIA timeframes for response are too long and too lax	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	A profession of OIA/Privacy Act Officials	There is currently no career path or recognition of levels of expertise or qualification for officials working in the OIA or Privacy Act (like the UK or Canada). This would feed into improving the culture of agencies for change and improvement of delivery of the OIA. This could also include training and guidance for managers/custodians of datasets as well growing skills and capabilities of Ombudman investigatory as the technology landscape changes.	There is currently no career path or recognition of levels of expertise or qualification for officials working in the OIA or Privacy Act (like the UK or Canada).	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC	In June the idea was grouped under theme five.
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	OIA Centre of Excellence	There should be an OIA Centre of Excellence (like the old Information Authority) back on a statutory basis.	Responsibility for and practice of the OIA is spread across the public sector and it is hard to manage by the public	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Broaden the scope of the OIA	We need to broaden the scope of the OIA, in particular the definition of official information, to include the information supplied to inquiries.	The OIA scope is too narrow.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Reform the OIA and change the culture	We need to improve the culture of agencies towards the OIA by focusing on the purposes of the Act. We need to commit to reform the OIA through consultation and participation from New Zealanders. The reform should make the OIA self contained and distinct from the Ombudsman Act Powers.	The OIA is not not adequate and needs to be strengthened.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	7	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC, MoJ
Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	OIA Accessibility of Disclosed Information	When you get OIA information it is not always in the form which is easy to use or accessible to the requester for example image only scanned PDFs. OIA data when provided by the requester should be in basically accessible formats like searchable text, HTML, spreadsheets and raw date. All the data should comply with S16 of the OIA.	When you get OIA information it is not always in the form which is easy to use or accessible to the requester for example image only scanned PDFs	Idea provided to agency	7	3. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Tell School Students What is Going On	As a school student it is impossible to know what is going on in Parliament, the decisions that have been made and what they are. Many of these issues effect us and we have no idea about them or how to find out about them. A 5min video of what happened in the week posted on a channel we use and connected to schools could mean that it could be played in assemblies or classes or at least sent to us on the newsletters or policitcal info Boards. We need to have access to the conversation and to participate.	We are a sector of the society and we have our own views which should be heard. It isn't equitable access to information and decision making otherwise.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	1,2,3	1. Participation in democracy	MoE, MYD, OCC, OoC
Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Political "Boards" in Schools	There should be political boards or bodies in schools to feed their ideas into the decision making process in Wellington and into Parliament. There is no current structure to help engagement with democracy.	The voice of young people should be heard and they should be included in the decision making process of New Zealand government, particularly if issues affect them. OGP IRM Mid-term Report February 2018	Introduce citizenship education to increase democratic participation	The IRM researcher recommends government expands its work with citizen-led groups to introduce citizenship education to increase democratic participation. The very first step would be for central government to commit to working with youth, ethnic groups, and local government to develop this commitment and its milestones. This work could build on existing initiatives such as the October 2016 Civics, Citizenship and Political Literacy workshop, and could focus on a sub-national project in South Auckland, with specific goals for government and the community to improve voter participation in the 2019 local government elections. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	MPs Consult Electorates Before They Vote	An electorate votes someone in and then can vote anyway they want on things they didn't campaign on. There needs to be more consultation more often with electorates particularly on conscience votes - whose conscience?	We need to have better access to the decision making process. MPs represent an electorate but some don't share what is being decided or what approach is being taken and why. Otherwise it is a black box.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Engage with Maori and Pacifika	Government needs to include the voices with Maori and Pacifika into decision making more. Their views need to be reflected in policy development, working groups and decision making more consistently.	Maori and Pacifika have unique perspectives and have much to add. It needs to be equitable.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Public participation to develop policies and services	DPMC,DIA, Population agencies
Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Engage with the Disengaged	If the Government is to be open, it should do more to engage with those that are disengaged. These consultations are with people that come forward to be engaged with. Everyone has a right to be included and their views reflected. Government needs to do more and try harder.	Everyone has a right to be included and their views reflected.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Public participation to develop policies and services	DPMC,DIA, Population agencies
Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Regional Views Represented in Wellington Policy Development	Ministerial advisory groups and Working Groups should include regional representation. They shouldn't be just filled with Wellington people or people who don't understand the views of people in the South Island. Everyone has the right to be represented and have access to the discussion - all parts of the country should be heard.	Because the issues that are important to people in the South are different to those in the North. A regional perspective and regional issues are not always included in important government policy developments or think tanks - they are inequitable.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. OGP IRM Mid-term Report February 2018	Develop standards for public consultation on policy initiatives	The IRM researcher recommends the NZ government co-create, adopt, and implement government policy to set out minimum standards for public consultation on policy initiatives and changes to service delivery. This policy should draw on international standards as articulated by the International Association for Public Participation (IAP2). The next action plan should set a strategic goal to raise its IAP2 level from the present involve or consult to collaborate . This could be fully realised over the third and fourth action plans. The 2018-2020 action plan could include mileston es to trial new approaches to public engagement in policy making, linking the current commitments 1, 5, and 7. This would move beyond the internal focus of commitment 7; look to developing the next OGP Action Plan (commitment 5); and progress realising the vision for commitment 1 (open participatory budgeting). It could bring together the currently somewhat unconnected OGP activities involving the three central agencies (Department of Prime Minister and Cabinet, the State Services Commission, and the Treasury) and the Department of Internal Affairs; review NZ and international experience in direct public engagement in public policy design and implementation (including the innovative use of new ICT tools to facilitate two-way interactions and deliberation).		Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Public participation to develop policies and services	DPMC,DIA
Online submitter	Expand the all of government consultations listing	An expanded consultation listing (https://www.govt.nz/browse/engaging-with-government/consultations-have-your-say/consultations-listing) can be used as a mechanism to track and measure indicators of quality (eg consultation time period, readability). This would be done through the creation of a public consultation standard (work on this has already been started by DIA), which would provide a consistent method of data capture. Opening this data up via an API will enable the list to be automated and also to be reused by anyone who wants to analyse or share the consultations. Expanding the data collected to include upcoming/planned engagements will give the public and different interest groups more time to engage. It also helps the public service see what is happening across the sectors, which could encourage collaboration between engaging with the same or similar audiences.	Quality public engagement is a cornerstone of good policy and service design. Transparency across the engagements government is having is essential to keep the system accountable. Currently, there is no reliable view of all the consultations and engagements being done by government, and no measure of their quality is. To make sure any intervention or programme for improvement could be measured for it's success, the system itself needs to be tracked. There is also great opportunity to improve transparency across the system with the consistent capture of an extended set of metadata with a public consultation standard, and the reuse of the consultations data via the API. An extra benefit is an improvement to the co-ordination across government and the ability of the public to be notified of planned engagements before they're made official. Allowing more time for people to engage is a major pain point in the current system.	Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Public participation to develop policies and services	DPMC,DIA
Online submitter	Develop a permanent and properly resourced government unit to collect, process and communicate ongoing public input such as a Commission of Public Input	Big idea: This unit would collect, process and communicate public input so it is an ongoing activity, not just a one off event. It needs to be appropriately resourced with a dedicated, trained public input staff unit to collect and process the public input. Scaled down proposal to fit 2-year time frame: work on creating one on a particular issue or focus, or linked issues, like housing and transport – but check with politicians for what issues they want input on and would be likely to listen to, and preferably, get involved in before choosing. They wanted something on tax and welfare, so what next? Collate all existing data, hold new summits/working groups to address the issues, and aim to produce options for policy development in mid-2018, which would be a good time in the new government s cycle. Aim to showcase it as an example of innovation to match the best examples from the US or elsewhere. However then archive it/make it a permanent organisation that can then be broadened beyond the two year time period if it works/if supported. Additional idea to support this: appoint a figurehead, ideally a Minister of Public Input or if not a senior government staffer: public input needs a champion, so governments need a Minister for Public Input. Already Canada has a Minister for Democratic Reform; the UK a Minister for Civil Society and Minister for Political & Constitutional Reform. What would it look like///C:\Users\jlee349\AppData\Local\Temp\msohtmlclip1\01\clip_image001.jpg" a Public Input Collection Unit would collects public input		Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Online submitter	1. Spread a Gold Standard of Decision-maker Driven Engagement across government	Proposal: Create and spread a Gold standard Decision-maker Driven Engagement for NZ government that will have more impact because it involves the decision makers in the process; focus on issues the government want public input on; produces recommendations usable for politicians; and feedbacks the government response/action. Principles to implement: The Gold standard of Decision-maker Driven Engagement should embed principles such as:Involve decision makers throughout the process Involve relevant government ministers in the design Communicate closely with government throughout the process Seek a government ministers to champion the process Focus on issues the Government wants public input on Ask government ministers to identify pressing issues they would welcome input on E.g. Housing or infrastructure challenges, or immigration Run engagement exercises o Create politically usable input Make sure the input processes consider constraints and conflicts that exist in political reality Produce several not just one options for politicians to consider Produce timely data for politicians by operating quickly and on a large enough scale e.g. online Feedback Government s Response Communicate public input initiatives over time not		Idea contributed to draft NAP	5,6	2. Wellington Workshop 23 May 2018	Government needs to Co-design with Communities	To fully understand the needs of the community, government needs to co-design policies and processes alongside them, or let them lead. The involvement needs to happen at the problem definition stage not at the end of the process (eg including community in the redesign of jury service). The mechanisms used to engage with communities should be easy to use and community members should be paid or given some recompense for their time. OGP IRM Mid-term Report February 2018	Expand the Expert Advisory Panel to include greater civil society representation	The IRM researcher recommends the EAP s current Terms of Reference be amended to add civil society representatives elected by civil society and to ensure that all EAP members undertake regular OGP engagement with the public. This will provide a broader civil society voice than at present and broadcast government s public engagement commitment. Membership within the EAP should also be regularly rotated and include people who can advise on online access requirements for those with disabilities. The EAP could consider and recommend to Government what incentives could be offered to encourage the broader civil society voice. This would require an increased budget and resources for implementing NZ s OGP activities, assisting civil society to contribute, and increasing the profile of OGP in NZ. Online submitter	2.Create a Career Path for Government Engagement Staff	Proposal: Create a Career Path for Government Engagement Staff that trains, develops and rewards staff across government departments involved in engagement and public input. Principles to implement: Create differentiated roles within government engagement To make public input work, it needs a range of activities and staff with varying skills and aptitudes to carry them out. It s not just about organising a one off consultation. For example it could include: Government Liaison Staff – who manage the relationship with government; so they gather politician s input into the design and focus on public input, ensure they receive the outputs from public input; solicit and communicate the government s response Public Input Collection Staff - ensure public input is collected according to best practice such as using a range of sources; using a range of methods that produce constructive conversations; with transparency about is on/off the table; and accurate recording of the input. In particular, Participation selection officers collect public input from a diverse range of sources with a mix of all potential groups, but making sure that elites do not dominate and participants treat each other as equal peers. Issue selection strategists - collect public input on any issue including those that are most important to the public, those politicians haven t yet decided on, crisis issues, complex issues and those more manageable. Enacting the proposed legislation would guarantee a proper mechanism to develop the partnership between Māori and Crown to one of partnership. This would provide NZ with one of the important bases allowing the relationship to move from a colonial context to a partnership context. In particular it would make improvements to the conditions under which Māori cultural property is held in government institutions. Ko Aotearoa Tēnei recommends reform of laws, policies or practices relating to health, education, science, intellectual property, indigenous flora and fauna, resource management, conservation, the Māori language, arts and culture, heritage, and the involvement of Māori in the development of New Zealand's positions on international instruments affecting indigenous rights. Online submitter	Accountability Information	Extend organisational accountability information on the https://www.govt.nz/organisations/Govt.nz A-Z of government agencies.This is information that helps people know which agency they can contact when they're taking a complaint, also what that agency can do (eg prosecute, review etc). This work would need to be done in collaboration with the Office of the Auditor General based on the work they have done and reported on http://oag.govt.nz/2016/accountabilityhttp://oag.govt.nz/2016/accountability. govt.nz is recognised by the OAG as an ideal platform as they have said "To be useful, this information needs to be kept up to date and in a user-friendly format. … [on a website]; that aims to make it easier for people to understand and find government agencies."	People have to do all the hard work finding and understanding what they're able to do when something goes wrong for them. Not all accountability information is published, and when it is published, it can be hard for the general public to understand it. It is critical that there is transparency across the system about what people can do and who they can complain to or ask for a review.	Idea provided to agency	N/A	3. Transparency and accountability	DIA
Online submitter	Include anti-corruption commitments in the next action plan	Reform whistleblowing laws to increase awareness and protections for whistleblowers There is public concern regarding insufficient protections for whistleblowers. While some consequential work on the Protected Disclosures Act (2000) has followed the recent whistleblower investigations in 2016, it is essential that the NZ government complete its review. Specifically, the NZ government could reform the current whistleblowing law to address the current barriers people face when raising public interest concerns and make the law itself easier to access and understand. Take measures to establish a public central register of company beneficial ownership An important issue facing New Zealand is the exploitation of foreign companies and trusts by corrupt officials, tax evaders, etc. Including this issue in the next action plan will bolster New Zealand s anti- corruption efforts, which do not currently include a strategy for making a company beneficial ownership register public. A wider, public database of beneficial owners of companies and trusts will save costs and prevent corruption.		Idea provided to agency	N/A	3. Transparency and accountability	SSC	SSC is currently leading a review of the Protected Disclosures Act 2000.
Online submitter	Accuracy of NIWA Data for the NZ Temperature Record	NIWA should have a formal internationally accepted NZ Temperature record with has known standards and model which is peer reviewed and tested with independent international analysis. The research should follow best practice and academic protocols so the results can be trusted. They should be open to discussion and challenge from the public and transparent about their decision making. Government policy should not be based on doubtful climate data which can t be validated. Currently there is no transparency in the way NIWA calculates the de facto NZ Temperature Record. While NIWA contends there is no official temperature record, they collect data through the 7 Station Series (7SS). These data are used to underpin government policy on climate change as this is deemed the baseline from which any deviation is a rise or fall of temperature in New Zealand. NIWA data are not peer reviewed and cannot be replicated as is standard scientific practice. Other scientists have run the same raw data and found a significantly different temperature trend over the past 100 years. (De Freitas, Dedekind & Brill, in 2015 analysed the same data using the correction methods NIWA claim they use, only +0.28 degrees in the last 100 years in comparison with NIWA s estimate of +0.91 degrees). Such a wide discrepancy between modest and beneficial warming and verging on detrimental effects should be resolved in an open and cooperative manner. NIWA will not discuss, meet or indulge in any challenge to their data outside of government even with technical,	The NZ temperature record is the basis from which government departments assess projections re temperature rise and or other criteria in the future. We need to be able to implicitly trust the validity of government data and research and should follow well accepted scientific conventions. Research which is the basis of policy and decision making implicating billions of dollars implications for the economy and the balance sheet, should be sound, transparent and able to stand rigorous testing and independent peer review. Scientists outside of NIWA have no rights to be heard or to have their alternate view considered which is against the principles of open government. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Environmental Accountability	The basic idea is to hold people, companies, and different sectors responsible for the environmental impact that they have. Companies that produce large emissions or pollute and people who run farms should have to take measures to add something positive our environment. Whether this looks companies and people paying money into environmental initiatives or there being a set of better rules and regulations that are strictly monitored, anything that detriments our environment should be limited. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Parking	We need to have more free angle parking around school zones and other wide streets so people do not drive around looking for a park and wasting petrol they may not have the money to refill, which also causes problems in the environmental area. This brings on stress as jobs are limited and parents have children to raise, some of them may not grow up to be a respectful, responsible, caring, careful, loving and more person in life. There are many other area's involved with this but parking is one of my greatest and most noticed, and I believe if you acknoledge my idea and take action this place could become a whole lot better! Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Regional and small town investment	Small towns like Milton are ravaged by meth crises. The main population of regions are old people and students, as high skilled work has moved to the nearby big cities. To overcome those issues, the government should invest in community centres, business, and youth activities to actually give people a place in their community to feel involved. The issue is that these towns are hollowed out but the government can help to give them life again. Dunedin - school workshop 29 May 2018	Consumer culture	We are living in a Neo-liberalistic age where private corporations hold all the power and from that, a consumerist culture has been born. Society focuses on purchasing goods or items but has little understanding of the enviromental, social and mental repercussions. If we as New Zealand escape this culture it would be not only benificial for New Zealand but New Zealand on a International stand point. Firstlywe need to stop exporting environmentally harmful goods or packaging and stop importing these aswell. Secondly we need to start investing money into more eco friendly study and testing. By doing this we can create job openings for people looking into this research but also into the production schemes of these things. We can create more eco friendly items that look after our enviroment and stop rubbish from being dumped into the ocean. If New Zealand leads this movement we could gain extra revenue and create more partnerships with countries that could support. Being a more independent country like this we can start to use the money for country related issues. This is a movement that could combat alot of issues on a national scale and benifit society and the world as a whole. Online submitter	Education - Financial Literacy, home ownership	Being a financial adviser for nearly 20 years, I found a lot of clients although well-educated and have well paid job, but their financial aren't sound. Some found them stuck in their day job and want the options, some even don't have their own home. When we took our client through the journey, they often told us they couldn't imagine that they could achieve what they achieve. I found that if the home ownership is what we want the nation to improve, why not start when they are in school, perhaps at intermediate age. Having this goal in mind, we should then reduce the consume debt as the people would have an ultimate goal and would behave at present instead letting themselves go, spending money on what they don t need.
